BURGLAR ROUTED WITH BALL BAT IN HARLEM BATTLE

Knocked-Out Intruder Identified by the Police as "Chicago Kid."

Bolomon Upbin, sixty years old, a tailor living on the third floor of burgher in the kitchen. His shout for help brought from adjoining rooms his daughter, Ethel, twentyone; his sons, Harry, nineteen and David, thirteen, and a boarder, Sydney Glass, twenty.

The tailor had grappled with the burgiar, who was armed with a "fruit hammer," one end of which has a knife-like edge. Glass seized a baseball bat and hit the burglar on the head when he could do so without striking the others, who were scratching, pinching, choking and beating the intruder.

They had fought through several rooms when a blow dazed the burglar. Little David, who had been wriggling among the combatants hitting when he could, was cut on the neck and abdomen with the burglar's weapon. The cries of the Upbin family aroused the neighborhood and filled the street.

"Don't kill me, don't kill me, begged the burglar finally in Yiddish "I'm only a poor Jew."

At Upbin's order they stopped beating him. He made a dash for the window but the Upbins caughthim by the feet. He was about to squirm loose and dive three stories when Policemen McGrath and Gruber burst into the room and dragged him back. He had to be treated by an ambulance surgeon for injuries to his head, and David Upbin had to go to bed after his lacerations were dressed.

BOY OF 15 SHOT IN CHEST; DID NOT SEE ASSAILANT

Felt Pain, Saw Blood and Staggered to Station, Then Collapsed.

"Lieutenant, I'm shot," said fifteen-jear-old Vincenzo Posiuci of No. 65 Mott Street to Police Lieutenant Dennis Horigan of the Elizabeth Street Station last night as he collapsed in front of the desk. Dr. Woodson of Volunteer Hospital found he had been shot in the sest. His condition is serious.

At the hospital just before he was operated upon the boy told detectives he was at the corner of Mott and Bayard Streets when he feit a sharp pain in the chest, and realized he had been shot when blood started to flow. To Father James Daley, of St. James's Church, the boy told the same story, declaring that he did not see his assailant. The detectives say the boy's shirt bore powder marks, as if the gun had been placed close to him.

PAPERS WITHHELD FROM LUSK INQUIRY

Sensational Evidence Remains in Court Custody Despite Legislative Committee.

The production to-day in evidence of papers of a sensational character, before the Lunk legislative com mittee apparently has been prevented by the action of Chief Magistrate McAdoo, who helds that the documents seized two weeks ago in the Rand School raid must remain in court custody for the present.

Senator Lusk, before the decision was announced, had stated that sen sational documents were to be produced before his committee to-day Since the raid the seized papers have been under the control of Deputy Attorney General Berger as an office of the court. He said to-day "the views of Judge McAdoo will be met in every particular," which was construed to mean that the Lunk committee would not be able to receive the papers expected to-day.

The Magistrate ruled that here after the documents taken on his search warrant would be held not only technically but actually in the custody of the court. He aiready had refused to obey a subpoens the Lusk committee had issued for certain of them several days ago. The Magistrate said that under the law the papers must remain in his custody until the motion for their return now pending before him had been decided. and that neither the Lusk committee nor any one else had any right to them.

If the motion for their return should be decided in ravor of the Rand School they would then go back, and the Lusk committee would be able to subpoena them duces tecum.
